

BAN ON GERMAN MUSIC IN U. S. IS DECLARED UNWISE

J. Freund.

There is "a great poet a writer of humanity which is superior to talents by exercise." This is the main thing that Emerson places in the hands of the mighty was the most pervasive element in the inspiring address made by John C. Freund at the Club dinner last Thursday evening.

To matter what his calling, the man of magnitude to-day is bringing a message to America in accord with the message that he is facing her. It was the poet's fervor that Mr. Freund in his talk on "The House Before us in Music" resolved his message into a philosophy of "God will among men earth—Peace."

Music Institutions Hurt.

The issue, as Mr. Freund in his nationwide experience sees it, is a matter of the music world must face. It is already the music industries are being disabled, and through the disabilities the artists of the United States will suffer, for the art world of music depends greatly upon the trade element for support and sustenance in its professional career. The great industrial houses have always given largely toward the financial support of music enterprises. With these industries crippled the responsibility falls upon us.

It is to "rouse the people to a sense of what we've got to do," as he puts it, that Mr. Freund at the age of twenty is "doing his bit" and larger part, in a national service. "It's up to you in Washington," he said, "to keep alive the art spirit." Form a committee here to serve these musicians who are pushed to the wall. Take care of them. We are behind the old world in caring for our artists. Italy, France, Germany even industrial England and give governmental consideration to this need.

Objects to Tax on Art.

"Now we are talking of taxing music—because we can do without it—because our legislators have about as much use for it as they have for a yellow dog."

"A singing man is a fighting man," Major General Bell said to Mr. Freund recently when the project was started to provide $100,000 for an auditorium and to maintain there some vital and cultural element in the lives of our troops in training on Long Island.

Another pertinent music topic Mr. Freund answered was the much discussed point of using German music today. "Why," he asked, "should we look askance upon the old German masters? Why America own the musical taste largely to the influence of German revolutionists who came to this country in 1848 for the freedom of speech and life that the United States offered and that Germany denied. I would answer, he said, "those who ask what to do in this matter—as one woman did whose son was on the firing line—Madame, a little Beethoven beautifully played, it will bring balm to your spirit."

Wagner could not get recognition in Germany. Von Bulow, whose glory came to him in Paris, at one time changed his name to De Bulow. And finally, concluded Mr. Freund, "look for and foster talent among your rising musicians, encourage them for the masses, that out of your mass-soul may come something truly great and beautiful and useful."

There was so much of guidance in the words of Mr. Freund that it seems of particular benefit at this moment to give them to those who were not privileged to hear him.

"Messiah" To Be Given.

The newly created oratorio section of the choir of the Church of the Covenant, under the direction of Sydney Lloyd Wrightson, offers an interesting factor in the city's music life this winter. At Christmas-time, on the evening of January 7, the traditional song-service of this sacred festival will be observed by the rendition of "The Messiah" of Handel. It is hoped that an augmented choir of 250 voices will combine to make this, and two other oratorios to be given later, an inspiring opportunity for those who take part and for those who attend to join in the dignity and the beauty of these works.

The war-tax on music, that has made Uncle Sam a one-tenth partner in all musical events of the country, seems to be affording no difficulty. It has been stated that the government collected $1,000 from three concerts in New York on the first day.

Bohemian papers have announced that Austrian churches as well as organ builders have been notified that all organ pipes in all churches of the monarchy will soon be requisitioned to fill the need of war industries.

Verily we need to shoulder our responsibilities and think in time of preserving for ourselves and for posterity the cultural and soul-saving benefits of the arts before we, too, enter into a war-madness.

WAR DADDY DRIVE OFFICIALS TO MEET AGAIN TOMORROW

The fate of the war daddy campaign hangs in the balance today.

A conference of Washington citizens behind the movement to raise a $60,000 fund in this city to provide entertainment for soldiers away from camp will be held Monday morning at which time the question of whether to continue the campaign will be decided.

Although no solicitation was made by the members of the Washington committee, last week contributions from individuals amounting to $2,100 were received at headquarters of the campaign committee, 1012 G street northwest. The total subscriptions to the war daddy campaign today were $22,453.53.

Large Donations Few.

Officials in charge of the campaign fund were of the opinion today that workers would find it rather difficult to interest the public in making large donations, following the thorough canvass, the District by the Y. M. C. A. team workers who were raising a fund to provide recreation for the soldiers in camp.

Henry White, former ambassador to France, is chairman of the Washington committee, which includes some of the District's most prominent residents. John Poole, president of the Federal National Bank, is treasurer.

35 Per Daddy.

In reference to the Y. M. C. A. campaign officials of the war daddy movement postponed for a week their campaign which originally began two weeks ago. With the Y. M. C. A. campaign actively closing last night and a big mass meeting at the Belasco Theater this afternoon to celebrate the event, war daddy campaign promoters were doubtful of the expediency of starting the campaign again Monday.

Three dollars was the amount asked of contributors to the war daddy fund, which was to promote outside recreation, games, amusements, and concerts for men of all branches of the military service.

GOVERNMENT PLANS TO TAKE LABOR CENSUS

So that it may be known where it stands to me for keeping the war wheels turning, the Government probably soon will undertake a national census of the labor supply.

Such a census would definitely locate labor which could be shifted from one section to another, and would provide a basis for supplying pressing needs in many vital industries.
